of the state come out openly to work for the re-election of Governor Aram J. Pothier and the other republican candidates but United States Senator Heary F. Lippitt, himself a cotton manufacturer, took the stump and campaigned the state in person.

An Unusual Occurrence. Rhode Island has been unused to seeing its senators in political gatherings, even when they were seeking their own election. The avowed issue which drew Senator Lippitt and the textile manufacturers into the campaign is the tariff.

Pothier Seeks a Fourth Term. Governor Pothier made his campaign r a fourth term, however, almost thely of state issues. If he is re-scied it will be the first time in years that a governor has been howen for four successive terms in his state and he will be looked upon y many as a potential candidate for synchronic and a spotential calminate for enteressor to United States Senator George Peabour Wetmore next year. Governor Pothier is opposed for recursion by Lewis A. Waterman, the defineratic candidate, who last year reduced the reduced the governor's record plural-fly of 11.769 in 1909 to 1,140 in 1910.

Property Qualifications the Issue. The issue on which the democrats we haid particular stress is the re-all of the old property qualifications which makes it essential for votcrs for certain offices to be taxed on at least $124 worth of personal property. The republicans, however, have included this issue in their platform which incorporates the most progressive ideas that the party has ever advanced in this state.
